Interests Allied With Brewers Have Contributed to Great Coffer Handled Under Unified Command

ARTICLE V

THE brewing interest—whose tentacles reach out to Hearst's man, Brisbane—does not stand alone. Allied with it are a swarm of other business interests, enlisted through community of aim or fear of punishment. Among them they have gathered in single years funds which rival those of a great national party at a Presidential election. And the Federal officer who has most closely investigated these funds declares that he is far from sure that he has uncovered all of them. He admits that he has learned little about how they are used.

For years there has been a unified command in handling this great fund. A central organization, the National Association of Commerce and Labor, has been formed to control it, and this organization has accomplished three purposes.

First, it has served as camouflage. Since there is about the name nothing to suggest the liquor interest. The name was actually chosen, the United States Brewers' Association records show, because it sounded like that of the United States Department of Commerce and Labor, which had not been divided at the time this was formed—1914.

Second, it has given efficiency to handling funds. To it have come moneys not only from its parent, the United States Brewers' Association, but from the whiskey interests and from allied trades and subsidiaries which it has been able to drag into line. All its funds were under control of one man.

Third, it has given a sort of legal protection against prosecution for violation of the corrupt practices act—a protection that is incomplete, as the heavy fine of brewing concerns in Texas and Pittsburgh shows. Under the Federal law it is criminal for a corporation to contribute to political funds, and, in fact, in the Pittsburgh cases several indictments were nolle prossed because it was found that the alleged offenders were not incorporated. The United States Brewers' Association is incorporated, and hundreds of thousands of dollars coming from the United States Brewers' Association have gone into the National Association.

Salary of $40,000
Paid to Organizer

At the head of this organization the United States Brewers' Association placed Percy Andrus, who claims the honor of suggesting its formation. It is the man who, from the funds thus given him, subsidized the disloyal German-American Alliance. Even before he formed the new body he had "worked" with the German-American Alliance in Ohio. His salary was greater than that of any United States official except the President, $40,000 a year. At the time of the formation of the organization he held Ohio up as an example and stated his purpose to extend the Ohio organization throughout the country. Among other things he said:

"The value of this work to the industry in each state where it is accomplished will be very appreciable, for it is impossible to obtain and use as I have described the political knowledge concerning Congressional districts in any state without at the same time acquiring the same data concerning the counties and Senatorial districts of that state. . . . It will therefore rest with the interest in each particular state to put to particular use the knowledge obtained concerning those smaller units."

As stated, the facts that are known concerning the financial activities of this organization are far from complete. The United States Senate is seeking more of them. The following are taken from a memorandum prepared by E. Lowry Humes, United States Attorney in Pittsburgh, for the use of the court in fixing sentence on the United States Brewers' Association and allied interests when they plead nolle contendere to indictments charging corruption.

Extent of Operations
Was Called Startling

During 1914 the United States Brewers' Association turned over to Andrus $330,138. The Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association paid him $90,000. With other contributions he is known to have received at least $525,116.28. Mr. Humes continues:

"The extent of the operations of the United States Brewers' Association in 1914 reaches startling proportions. Because of the alleged destruction of records the government has no assurance that it has a complete record of the funds raised and distributed by that association. We do, however, have an elaborate record of the collection by the United States Brewers' Association in 1913 of $755,885.18, a considerable proportion of which remained in the treasury of the association at the close of the fiscal year.

"In 1914 we have absolute record of collections, aggregating at least $999,200.88. How much more was collected during that year of which we have no knowledge because of the destruction of the association's records we can make no estimate. We do know, however, that the bank accounts which we have thus far succeeded in discovering aggregate in the neighborhood of a million and a half dollars."

These funds that came from the United States Brewers' Association were not all that reached Mr. Andrus. The records show that usually the Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association gave half as much as the brewers did. The organization bureau of the United States Brewers' Association is also known to have contributed heavily. In addition there were the contributions from the "allied interests." Mr. Andrus was very hazy on this subject when he was before the United States Senate investigating committee. Here is the testimony:

Senator King—In 1914-15 practically all the money that you collected or that was paid to the organization of which you were president came from the distillers and the brewers, did it not?

Mr. Andrus—No; not all. That was what afterward proved the bone of contention. I wanted an organization of the allied firms, among the allied trades, such as bottlemakers and glassmakers and so on. I got a considerable amount of funds from them.

Senator King—Did not a great portion of your funds, say, 75 to 90 per cent, come from the brewers and distillers?

Mr. Andrus—It is possible. I would not like to be committed on that.

"Quite some people depend very largely upon their trade with the breweries. The ramifications of that trade are enormous," Mr. Andrus said at another time when enlarging on this outside support. One of the charges the United States Senate subcommittee is now preparing to investigate is that "they (the brewers) have set in operation an extensive system of boycotting of American manufacturers, merchants, railroads and other interests."

The brewers themselves made sure that funds would be available for their use. In 1913 at a meeting of all the brewers of the United States, held in Chicago, it was agreed that contracts should be put out calling for the payment by the brewers to the United States Brewers' Association of a tax of 3 cents a barrel on all beer brewed. These contracts were not to become effective till the amount to be produced had reached $750,000 a year. They were to run for five years. The minimum was greatly exceeded.

Mr. Andrus has admitted that $42,693.41 of this money went toward subsidizing the disloyal German-American Alliance. Part of this went directly toward reviving the "Bulletin" of that organization, a publication which in November, 1917, seven months after this country had entered the war and a year after Andrus's money had resurrected it, published a poem which (translated) contained this:

"The oath is sacred. Therefore it should not demand What is so unholy! I will not help To cut to pieces the nation from which I sprung.

If that be treason it is inhumanity Which so pronounces it, without shame, in the name of the law! Let come what will! I am prepared! Here stand I and can do no other! Amen!"
